GAO Requests State Input on CDL Skills Test Administration

The U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) plans to e-mail chief administrators and/or your state CDL Coordinator a web-based survey on CDL skills testing. The GAO is an independent, nonpartisan agency of Congress that investigates the performance of federal agencies and provides reports to Congress on issues of national importance. The GAO was requested by 22 members of Congress to provide a report on CDL skills test administration. To respond to Congress, GAO is surveying state licensing agencies in all 50 states and Washington D.C. on issues such as CDL skills test administration, practices, and resources; wait times for the test; concerns that states have with the testing process; and views on the federal role in achieving commercial motor vehicle safety. The results of the survey will be included in a report to Congress, which is expected to be issued publicly later this year. This survey provides AAMVA members with the opportunity to inform Congress about CDL skills testing processes in each state and any concerns that you think Congress should be aware of, such as challenges meeting applicant demands and federal regulations. Members should see the notice from GAO within the next few days and can expect a request to respond by February 25.
